Biographical Note

Milton Rogovin was born in New York City in 1909 where he graduated from Columbia University in 1931 with a degree in optometry. He soon after moved to Buffalo, New York. Rogovin purchased his first camera in 1942 and later taught documentary photography at the University of Buffalo from 1972-1974, where he also received an MA in American Studies in 1972. His photographic work focused on social activism, and in 1983 he won the prestigious W. Eugene Smith Award for Documentary photography, which allowed him to travel internationally to continue his “Family of Miners” series. Rogovin died in 2011.

Scope and Content Note

There are three boxes that have not yet been arranged and described at the series level. Materials include correspondence, publications, transcripts, and a wide variety of audiovisual materials, including mostly U-matic tapes and audiotapes.
