Biographical/ Historical Note

Mitchell Payne was born on March 31, 1944 in Shawnee Mission, Kan. He attended Monmouth College (B.A., 1966), the University of Missouri at Kansas (1967), a Presbyterian seminary in Marin County, Calif., and the Rochester Institute of Technology (M.F.A., 1971).

While in Rochester, Payne worked on a number of photographic essays including Lisa, the story of a young blind girl, Strippers, and Hospital Pictures, his graduate thesis on neurosurgeons at Strong Memorial Hospital. In June 1971, Payne married Linda Montano, a teacher of sculpture at Nazareth College.

Payne and Montano moved to San Francisco, Calif. in the summer of 1971, where Hospital Pictures was exhibited at Focus Gallery in 1972. The same series of photographs was later published in Physician's World as "Neurosurgeons in Action" (1973). During the same period, Payne completed two independent assignments, one for West and the other for Design and Environment. Payne was awarded a National Endowment for the Arts grant in 1973 which resulted in the photographic essay, High School Youth. This project is thought to have provided impetus for his extended essay, Tammy, the portrait of a teenaged belly dancer. Payne (with collaborator Ken Graves) was again awarded a NEA grant in 1976 to compile material for American Snapshots; a book (1977) and later an exhibition (1978).
Despite these successes, Payne and Montano were unable to secure steady work in San Francisco. Payne actively solicited freelance and commercial assignments and temporarily taught photography classes for both the San Francisco Recreation and Parks Department and the University of California. His attempts at obtaining a permanent teaching position were unsuccessful, however.

Payne and Montano were divorced in 1977. He returned to Kansas and began working for the family firm, Morrison, Gregg, and Mitchell Grain. Payne died August 19, 1977 from a gunshot wound. He was thirty-three.

Scope and Content Note

This collection arrived at the Center in 1981. Preliminary arrangement was begun, but soon abandoned; final arrangement and description by record types having eventually been completed in 1985. The collection has been divided into Papers and Photographic materials.

Papers

Series one: Papers, 1970 - 1977. Contains biographical information, correspondence, project files, and printed materials relating to Payne's brief career. The papers document his publications, photojournalistic assignments, exhibitions, and employment endeavors from 1970-74. The project files contain limited information on his major photographic essays, Lisa, Hospital Pictures, High School Youth, Tammy, and American Snapshots. Printed materials include handbooks, brochures, and clippings relating to photojournalism and photographic equipment; reviews of Payne's show at Focus Gallery (1972); notes about the dye transfer process; and other subjects.

For a more complete description of Payne's projects, see Appendix A. This collection contains little information on his personal life or photographic activities before 1970 or after 1974.

Photographic materials

The bulk of the collection is photographic materials in a variety of formats - negatives, contact sheets, color transparencies, and dye transfer materials. Negatives and contact sheets are primarily 35 mm. black-and-white, although there are some 6x6 cm., 6x9 cm., 4x5 in. and color negatives. Subjects include Payne's photographic essays, Strippers, Lisa, High School Youth, Tammy, and Neurosurgeons; family and friends; and some commercial work including architectural studies done for Design and Environment.

Series two: Personal photographs, ca.1880 - 1975. Contains black-and-white and some color photographs. Most are commercially processed photographs of Payne and his family and friends at weddings, parties, and at leisure. Personal photographs are also found in Series: Contact sheets and Series: Negatives.
Series three: Contact sheets, 1969 - 1976. Mostly from 35 mm. black-and-white negatives. Contact sheets exist for Payne's photographic essays, Hospital Pictures, Lisa, and High School Youth. Also included are many sheets with photographs of family, friends, vacations, children, parades, and Payne himself. There are family portraits of Payne's wife, Linda Montano; brother, Nettleton Payne, and sister-in-law, Penn; niece, Elizabeth; and parents, Mildred and Nettleton Payne. Some contact sheets are missing.

Series four: Negatives, 1969 - ca.1976. Mostly 35 mm. black-and-white. Negatives are stored in envelopes, most of which contain handwritten annotations regarding subject matter and date. There are more sets of negatives than contact sheets. Skips in numerical sequence indicate that some negatives may be missing. There is one box of unnumbered and sometimes unidentified negatives, consisting primarily of places and people.

Series five: Transparencies, 1968 - 1977. Consists of mounted and unmounted, black-and-white, color, and color copy transparencies of photographs from six of Payne's photographic essays. Most are from Hospital Pictures and American Snapshots. There are a few unidentified slides.

Series six: Dye transfer materials, ca.1971 - 1977. Consists of six sets of dye transfer tests which contain handwritten and typed notes, test strips, graphs, charts, work prints, masks, and separation negatives. There are also matrices and negatives from his American Snapshots project, ca.1977.

Arrangement

The collection is organized as follows:

Series 1: Papers

Subseries 1: Biographical materials, 1970-1974
Subseries 2: Correspondence, 1971-1977
Subseries 3: Project files, 1969-1977

Subseries 1: Contact sheets, 1969-1976

Note: Contact sheets and negatives have been arranged according to Payne's own system. Most are numbered sequentially, (i.e. number 1 negative set was printed on number 1 contact sheet), however, not all contact sheets and negatives have a corresponding set, and there are gaps in the sequence. Duplicates are filed together.

Contact sheets without numbers are filed after those with numbers. Title and date of contact sheets (when known) is noted on negative envelopes.

Negatives which are unnumbered but which contain handwritten annotations have been divided into broad subject areas, and then alphabetized by Payne's labels. Unnumbered negatives are filed after numbered negatives. Negatives with neither numbers or labels have been divided into black-and-white and color and then filed randomly.

Appendix A: Descriptions of Selected Photographic Essays

Lisa (Rochester, N.Y., 1969-72)

Payne worked on this photo essay about an active, young, blind girl while a graduate student at the Rochester Institute of Technology. He photographed Lisa extensively at home, school, and play. Payne wanted to record her relationships, and there are many images of Lisa with family, friends, and teachers. Payne submitted images from this essay to Life in 1971, but was told the project lacked drama.

Hospital Pictures (Rochester, N.Y., 1971-72)

Payne began this project in Jan. 1971 as an examination of the characteristics of the staff and patients of a large, modern hospital. He had planned to photograph two hospitals, but eventually restricted his essay to one neurosurgeon, Dr. Duke, a resident physician associated with Strong Memorial Hospital. Payne felt that his early photographs in this series were too sentimental, and later began to document aspects of the impersonal nature of the doctor-patient relationship.

Focus Gallery (San Francisco, Calif.) exhibited these photographs as Hospital Pictures in Mar. 1972. This essay was published as "Neurosurgeons in Action" in the July 1973 issue of Physician's World. The Center for Creative Photography (Tucson, Ariz.) exhibited the photographs in 1977.
High School Youth (San Francisco, Calif., 1973-75)

Payne received an NEA grant of $3,900 in 1973 to do a photographic essay on adolescents in high school. This series includes images of teenagers at school, home, and at leisure. There is no evidence that this work was ever exhibited or published, though Black Star, a New York photo agency, expressed interest after hearing of the NEA award.

Tammy (San Francisco, Calif., 1973-76)

This project is thought to have grown from Payne's essay on high school youth. Tammy was a high school student and belly dancer from San Francisco, Calif. Numerous photographs show Tammy bathing, dressing, eating, dating, relaxing, socializing, exercising, and dancing. Tammy was exhibited at the Center for Creative Photography (Tucson, Ariz.) Jan.-Mar. 1984. There is no evidence of publication.

American Snapshots (California, 1976-77)

In 1976, Payne and Ken Graves were awarded a NEA grant to document American life. They sought photographs which required no captions or descriptions. From thousands of snapshots, they chose 112 which were eventually published and later exhibited as American Snapshots.

Miscellaneous smaller projects (1969-76)

Payne worked on many smaller projects from 1969-76. These included essays on the Drumgooles, a poor black family in Rochester, N.Y.; senior citizens; a local zoo; childless couples; a traveling home-care nurse (The Nurse's Story); a Berkeley, Calif. women's art show; "The House as Symbol", for Design and Environment; and the Women's Dress for Greater Freedom demonstration in 1972.
