Scope and Content of the Collection

The Josef Breitenbach Archive contains the personal papers and photographic materials of the photographer and teacher Josef Breitenbach (1896-1984). The materials in the archive date from 1873-1990 with the bulk of the collection dating from 1933-1983. The archive consists of correspondence files, biographical materials, manuscripts, exhibition materials, teaching files, publications, financial records, audiovisual materials, and photographic materials.

Breitenbach was born in Munich, Germany in 1896. He attended schools in Munich and later served in the military during 1916. He eventually joined his father's wine merchant business in 1919. Two school notebooks and early portraits are the extent of the documentation of this early period of Breitenbach's life. It is known that he traveled with the wine business, and early photographs and negatives of Italy and France were probably made by Breitenbach during those trips.

When the wine business went bankrupt in 1932, Breitenbach opened a portrait studio and began photographing the City Theater in Munich. Many photographs and negatives of German theater personalities including photographs of Karl Valentin and Albert Basserman exist from this year. Again, little documentation other than photographs and negatives exist from this time.

In September 1933, Breitenbach left Munich with his son Hans and settled in Paris. He established a portrait studio and began teaching photography. Documentation of the Paris years, 1933-1941, is rich and varied. Documentation exists as correspondence, exhibition announcements, writings, notebooks, teaching materials, identity cards, rent statements, and photographic materials. Exhibition announcements, correspondence, and tearsheets show that his photographs were exhibited and reproduced in Paris as well as other countries. As a correspondent for the British International News Agency, Breitenbach wrote about and photographed the following important exhibitions in Paris: [Freie] Deutsche Buch, 1936 (Free German Books); The Paris International Exposition, 1937; 5 ans de régime hitlérien, (Five Years of the Hitler Regime), 1938; the International Surrealism Exhibition, 1938; and [Freie] Deutsche Kunst (Free German Art), 1938.

As a member of the German expatriate community in Paris, Breitenbach photographed Helene Weigel and Bertolt Brecht, and the rehearsals for a Brecht play in 1938. He also photographed Max Ernst, Lyonel Feininger, and others. In addition, Breitenbach photographed panels for a planned exhibition for the Freedom Pavilion, New York World's Fair, 1939, The Germany of Yesterday, The Germany of Tomorrow.

In 1938 Germany revoked his citizenship. When Germany invaded France during W.W.II, Breitenbach was interned as an enemy alien in various camps. The archive documents with writings, correspondence, identity cards and other materials his time in the work camps, and his efforts to leave France. He successfully immigrated to the United States in 1941.

Josef Breitenbach established himself as a photographer and teacher in New York City in 1941. He lived there until his death in 1984. He used the English version of his name, Joseph, extensively after this period. He began to receive commercial assignments from magazines such as Fortune, Harper's Bazaar, and Time.

Breitenbach's long career as a teacher began in 1944 with an appointment to Black Mountain College in Asheville, North Carolina. Although Breitenbach was hired by Josef Albers for only that summer, his photographs extensively document the buildings, students, teaching methods of Josef Albers and others at Black Mountain College and were used in subsequent brochures for the college. In 1946 he began teaching at Cooper Union and in 1949 at the New School for Social Research, both in New York City. Correspondence, lecture notes, and audio tapes of his lectures richly document his career as a teacher. During this period, Breitenbach collected photographs to supplement his lectures in photography. In 1979 his photograph collection was sold to the Müncher Stadtmuseum in Munich, Germany. No photographs from his teaching collection exist in his archive.

From 1952-53, Josef Breitenbach served as the Chief of Still Photography for the United Nations Reconstruction Agency in Korea. Those years served as Breitenbach's introduction to Korea and Japan. Each year until the 1970s he worked on commercial projects in Asia to finance his travel and personal photographic work. Although his photographs were exhibited and reproduced in periodicals, Women of Asia (1968) was the only monograph published from this large body of work. Josef Breitenbach died in New York City in 1984.

ARTIFACTS

(9 linear feet)

AG90:58-63A Bronze medal awarded at Exposition internationale de Lucerne, Lucerne, Switzerland, October 1933; Empty negative envelopes, film canisters, and boxes; stereo viewer; match box collection; unexposed glass plates; original mounts of photographs in fine print collection with JB handwriting

PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS: NEGATIVES, TRANSPARENCIES, CONTACT AND PROOF PRINTS, 1920S-1980S

The Josef Breitenbach Archive contains over 88 boxes of negatives, stereo views, transparencies, contact prints, and proof prints. The materials are arranged hierarchically. Arrangement is first by format (glass, black-and-white sheet film, black-and-white roll film, color) then by size (8x10, 5x7, 4x5, stereo views, etc), and finally by subject within those parameters. This sometimes means that a subject will be split in two locations. For example, if Breitenbach documented an exhibition with 4x5 glass negatives and 4x5 sheet film, the negatives would be stored in two different boxes. A detailed list of the negatives exists and is available from the Archivist upon request.

Breitenbach's photographic career in Europe is documented well with glass negatives and stereo views and 120mm and 35mm negatives. The researcher can find landscapes, portraits, nudes, and documentation of exhibitions. Included are portraits of Shelia Greene, Lili Kraus, and German actors such as Albert Basserman and Karl Valentin. While living in Paris, Breitenbach also photographed Bertoldt Brecht, Helene Weigel, Max Ernst, James Joyce, and Aristide Maillol, to name a few.

Breitenbach's documentation of exhibitions in Paris during the late 1930s is an important source of information about the arts and politics before Germany invaded France in W.W.II. Breitenbach photographed; [Freie] Deutsche Buch, 1936 (Free German Books); The Paris

International Exposition, 1937; 5 ans de régime hitlérien, (Five Years of the Hitler Regime), 1938; the International Surrealism Exhibition, 1938; [Freie] Deutsche Kunst (Free German Art), 1938; and the panels for a planned exhibition for the Freedom Pavilion, New York World's Fair, 1939, The Germany of Yesterday, The Germany of Tomorrow.

Breitenbach arrived in New York City in 1941 and lived there until his death in 1984. 35mm, 120mm, and color transparencies record this period of his photographic activity. He produced commercial work for magazines such as American Fabrics, Esquire, Fortune, Harper's Bazaar, and Survey Graphic. He made portraits of John Dewey, Josef Albers, Oskar Maria Graf, and Sarah Vaughan. Beginning in 1952, black-and-white negatives and contact sheets as well as color transparencies record his extensive travels in Asia.

For commercial work in Asia, Breitenbach devised his own cataloging system. This has been maintained in the collection. Rolls of film were numbered chronologically by date and roll number. For example, 1967 #12, is the twelfth roll in 1967. The contact sheets for these negatives are also numbered in the same way.

Of special note in the Breitenbach photographic materials is early color work consisting of two Ilford Dufaycolor transparencies and two stereo transparencies from the 1930s.

Photographic Materials, 1920s-1980s

Includes glass plate negatives, glass stereo negatives, black-and-white negatives, color negatives and transparencies, and contact and study prints. Of special note are color stereo views, 1930s, in AG90:86 and Dufaycolor transparencies, 1930s, in AG90:116, 119.
